JOE MARTIN BUSY

Republicans aren't saying much about it, but it is extremely noticeable that Joseph W. Martin, house minority leader, is not playing a prominent role in the national campaign. Inside fact is that he is too busy trying to get reelected in his own district, where he is opposed by Edmund P. Talbot, former mayor of Fall River and a former sheriff of the county. Talbot is of French-Canadian extraction, a Catholic and a Spanish War veteran.

In the 1942 election, the largest city in this congressional district, Fall River, voted as follows: Joe Martin received 11,765 votes, while the Democratic nominee, Lomax, received 17,334 votes. Therefore, while the whole district went Republican by 17,000, Fall River went Democratic by almost 6,000. Already there is a 41,000 registration in a city which cast only about 30,000 votes in 1942.

Outside of Fall River, if Martin can be kept down to a 12,000 lead, Democrats figure he can be licked. Martin led outside Fall River in 1942 by 22,000. But in many of the small towns there are powerful groups of Yankee liberal intellectuals who are close to the Willkie line. Talbot has made contact with the United Nations groups in this area and they are working enthusiastically for him.

BIGGER AND BETTER BOMB

Army officials haven't revealed whether they plan to use it yet, but they've already perfected and tested a new flying robomb, bigger and faster than anything the Nazis have ever seen.

Fact is, the new robomb was tested in the Middlewest last month, and whizzed through the air at more than 100 miles an hour during performance checks. The bomb has been developed with the aid of the Ford Motor company. Whether it is in production or not is a military secret.

Actually, during the last war, Ford produced a heavy robot bomb of his own, but couldn't find out how it would perform under front line conditions. It has never been revealed, but, in the American part of World War I, one robomb was partially inspired by Gen. "Hap" Arnold, now commander of the U. S. army air corps.

Arnold brought his idea to the Ford company, asked Ford to work out a motor to go with it. Ford rolled up his sleeves, soon produced a two-cylinder engine that worked well. Probably if World War I had lasted another six months, the robomb would have made its appearance 24 years earlier.

NOTE—The original American robomb is still preserved in the Ford laboratories in Michigan.

TEXAS THINKS TWICE

Before Roosevelt delivered his campaign speech at the teamster's dinner, he had a private session with Teamster Pres. Dan Tobin, in which they discussed the political situation, especially in Texas, the state that had been trying to make up its mind whether to have Roosevelt electors or non-Roosevelt electors on the ballot.

"Did you hear Bob Hannegan's story about Texas, Mr. President?" asked Tobin. "With those electors coming and going he says it's 'On again, off again, gone again, Hannegan.' "

Roosevelt observed that he had done everything he could about Texas, but didn't know what was the matter with the folks down there.

"There's a fellow down there named Garner who doesn't love you much," replied Tobin, "but I don't think he's going to vote against the ticket. And if Texas does defeat you, they'll lose all the juiciest jobs in congress, for the best committee chairmanships from the speaker down are chiefly held by Texans. I don't think they'll cut off their noses to spite their faces."

Next day the Texas Supreme court voted to put the pro-Roosevelt electors on the ticket.

JAP WAR MAJOR JOB

Administration leaders aren't talking about it but they are privately concerned about America's reaction to V-E day. They not only fear a possible slowdown of production and fighting spirit, but also an unrestrained celebration on Armistice day.

Noisy street celebrations, widespread drinking and any feeling that the war is over will be most unpleasant for the millions of families who have sons in the Pacific still faced with the big job of defeating stubborn Japs.

• • •

There was strong sentiment within OWI to suggest announcements that unrestrained irresponsible celebration would be out of place, but Elmer Davis finally decided against it. No agency has the right to dictate to the people how they should receive the news, Davis feels. At the same time, OWI will propose that radio and press carry potent reminders that the war is not over and that we are still faced with a major conflict in the Pacific. OWI will point out that war effort must replace V-E celebrations.

G. I. Bill of Rights Explained At Club Luncheon Tuesday

The Kiwanis club heard John Davis of San Jose Tuesday give an interesting explanation of many features of the new "GI Bill of Rights" and how his office functions to carry out some of them.

Davis is the service member of an office set up by the county board of supervisors to assist veterans in expediting their claims or solving their problems. He explained the procedure followed in straightening out these veterans troubles.

During the month of August, the first month of operation, there were 259 claims going thru the office, and for September the number was 270.

Claims to be adjudicated by his office are cleared further thru the Ft. Miley office.

Dr. W. I. Merrill did the honors of presenting Davis for this talk on "County Service."

There were a number of guests at this meeting; Bud Weeks, home on furlough from Uncle Sam's service; Rex Fuller, Commander, and Wilbur Mitchell, vice commander of Campbell Post American Legion; Wes Dodge and C. J. Bennett of the Patterson Pacific Parchment Co. of San Jose, Jos. McKinnon, and Gene Hodges.

Next week, Herbert Shadle will preside with Frank Abernathy of San Jose talking on the "War Chest Drive."

Youth Center Has Program For Hallowe'en

Under the direction of Hal Belyew, director of the Campbell Youth Center, a special Hallowe'en program will be offered. Specially planned games and entertainment will be prepared and young people of the community are invited to participate in it, next Tuesday night.

In addition cake and refreshments will be served by a group of mothers.

The program at the Youth Center continues to attract many young people on Saturday evenings. Under the sponsorship of the Campbell Youth Council the Center closes at 11:30 on Saturday evenings giving ample time for young people to return to their homes before midnight. The Center is not open on school nights.

Community reaction to the program has been remarkably free of adverse criticism. The public has commended the Council for its work and the Community Chest has included $1000 in its budget for the continuation of the activities of the Youth Council. Personally interviewing residents nearby the Youth Center to obtain reactions, D. H. Baldwin, chairman of the Council, found a very understanding attitude toward the young people and the project characterized by this statement; "We were young once ourselves and think it's fine to have this place for Campbell's young people."

Among the returning members of the famed second marine division is Pfc. Harold A. Moulton, 24, of San Jose, a nephew of Miss Lina Moulton of Campbell. He awaits furlough and reassignment at the marine corps base in San Diego. His latest combat service was at Saipan.

Mrs. Fagalde Presides At PTA Meeting

"All that we put into the lives of others comes back into our own" was the keynote of greeting in Mrs. Clarence Fagalde's message to the high school P.T.A. when as president, she presided at the first meeting of the year, held October 11.

The theme for the year, "Community Life In Our Town," was outlined by Mrs. Earl Booker, program chairman.

The unit was lead in the pledge to the flag by Student Body President, Beverly Suess, who is also Citizenship and Legislation chairman. Singing of the national anthem was led by music chairman Mr. C. P. Klassen, accompanied by Mrs. Earl Booker at the piano. Mrs. Edith Kittrell led the inspirational reading "Train a child the way he should go and he will not depart from it when he is old."

The budget was presented by chairman Mrs. Leland Jones. Mrs. R. C. Page, study group chairman told of the group's summer meetings with Mrs. Winifred Jecker. More meetings have been requested, the first of which will be November 1.

Supt. James W. Dent talked on Legislation, and as amendments 3, 9 and 11 have direct bearing on our schools and educators these amendments were explained and discussed. Teachers were introduced and refreshments were served.

Mrs. Fagalde closed her remarks with the quotation:

"Progress is not measured by the distance we find ourselves from the goal, but by the distance we find ourselves from the starting point."

WAR CHEST ACTIVITIES

The National War Chest drive is now on in full swing. Be ready with your gifts. Make them as large as possible. The need is great and we have so much, in comparson to so many, having so little. Our money goes to our own boys in the service, our suffering allies and our own at home. Fifty per cent of the war chest is allotted to our own boys. The thing I would like to stress is this—be ready with your gifts, as the workers are giving up their time and spending their own money to do this job. Don't wait to be asked. Go to War Chest headquarters, which is the Campbell Hotel, Ethan Lamphear, Secty. and leave your donations. Your duty is clear. Let's do a good job and do it quickly.

Thanks a lot.

Herbert M. Shadle,
Campaign Chairman.

Strong; the surgical dressings, supervised by Mrs. E. L. Farnham were done in the Curry building, and the laprobe work, directed by the chairman and her committee, Mesdames Oliver Jensen, W. C. Mrs. Oliver Price, chairman of the Nov. 6 meeting, reported her committee is working on an interesting program. This being the annual Library tea, members and guests are invited. Helping Mrs. Price are Mesdames George Leigh, G. E. Farley, C. B. Reynolds, D. H. Cramer, Edna Smith, and Miss Winnie Grizzle.

F. O. Ralph J. Vick who was stationed at Casper, Wyoming, is now at Topeka army air base, Pauline, Kansas. Vick is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Vick, North Union avenue, and a C.U.H.S. alumnus, class of '42.

WENDELL WILLKIE

It may be many years before we shall be able to determine just how great the loss of Wendell Willkie is to this nation.

When men pass from earth's scenes we are inclined to minimize their faults and magnify their virtues. But with Wendell Willkie it is different. Whether we are Democrats or Republicans, conservatives or liberals, supporters of Willkie's ideals or opponents of them, we find it completely unnecessary to minimize or magnify. Our words can neither add to, nor detract from, his stature.

Wendell Willkie was a big man—big in body and spirit, big in courage, big in his concept of this world and its problems. His spectacular rise in political life was little short of miraculous. In four brief months he leaped from obscurity into national prominence and gained the greatest support ever accorded a Republican candidate for the Presidency.

He bowed out of active politics following his defeat in the Wisconsin primary. He knew it would be one of the hardest tests conceivable. But that's why he chose it. He simply could not find it in his nature to dodge, evade or compromise on any issue. He spoke bluntly, forthrightly and let the votes fall where they would.

Wendell Willkie's public career was brief. But the memory of him will long endure in the hearts of Americans.

SCIENCE JOINS THE FIGHT

Fire prevention week is past, but during those seven days of concentrated battle against fire the public learned of new weapons to combat uncontrolled fires. Among those weapons are such innocuous sounding devices as fog, foam and snow.

One story told how a munitions ship collided with a tanker off the East Coast a few months ago. The crash exploded and sank the munitions ship and turned the tanker into a raging inferno. By all the rules, the tanker should have been a total loss. It wasn't.

Twelve hours after the accident, Navy fire fighters arrived with some of the latest fire fighting tools. By then the heat was unbelievable. Bronze fittings melted like hot chocolate. Ahead of the Navy men as they went aboard the ship, traveled a ball of hissing fog. Sheltered behind it, they advanced toward the ship's stern. Arrived at the stern cargo tanks, they applied another modern fire fighting miracle: foam. From special nozzles they shot a smother of snowy bubbles which stuck on everything. The bubbles piled up in the tanks, floating on the burning gasoline like super-yeasty dough, choking out the fire. A $3,500,000 ship and 70,000 barrels of war fuel had been saved.

The mysterious fog that saved that ship was made by dozens of needle-fine streams of water rushing from a hose at 100 miles an hour. Backed by 150 pounds of pressure, these streams, aimed to shatter against each other, broke up every gallon of water into 23,000,000,000 particles— literally a drenching, cooling fog.

In spite of everything that has been done to prevent and extinguish fire, the tragic fact remains that fire losses are still rising—because we as a nation are too lazy or indifferent to use what science has given us!

PLASTIC TIRES

When the war iin the Pacific broke out and our supply of natural rubber was cut off, a number of ideas were advanced about the use of materials which might be substituted for it. Aside from synthetic rubber, however, virtually all of these were intended as little more than makeshifts until either synthetic or natural rubber would be freely available.

Now a plastic tire has been developed which might eventually make us independent of both natural and synthetic rubber, at least for highway transportation.

This new tire has been made to withstand twice the heat which natural rubber develops at high speeds. If it proves successful it would solve one of the big problems of highway carriers since synthetic tires although satisfactory for automobiles and light trucks, have not held up well on heavy duty vehicles. Not being effective in resisting heat, the synthetic heavy tires yield only 30 per cent of the wear obtained from natural rubber.

This rapid tire wear accounts to a large degree for the severe tire shortage now existing in the transportation field, and both military and civilian circles are worried about it. Trucks are being depended upon to carry such enormous quantities of war materials in addition to a huge tonnage of civilian commodities that any serious breakdown of these carriers due to lack of rubber would seriously hamper the war effort.

Just how soon plastic tires would be available for civilian use, even if the tests prove satisfactory, is uncertain. This new development, however, gives us a hint of "things to come."

UNSCHEDULED SCHOOL HOLIDAYS

California school schildren, since the fall terms opened, have been getting some unexpeced holidays—and while the youngsters can't be said to be complaining, there is a growing concern among parents and school authorities as classes are dismissed and schools are closed with increasing frequency, due to an acute shortage of grade school teachers.

San Francisco, faced with a lack of substitute teachers to take over in the absence of regular teachers, has had as many as 47 idle classes in a single day. In Southern California, placement officers report there is a shortage of 150 teachers to complete school staffs. Tulare County, a week or ten days ago, reported the closing of one of its schools, with 77 children sent home, because the regular teacher was ill and no substitute was available. From scores of other communities have come similiar reports of teacherless classes and temporarily closed schools.

Said Roy Cloud, executive secretary of the California Teachers Association, in commenting on the grade school crisis:

"Literally hundreds of our schools in California would not have opened for the fall term this year, except for the loyalty of teachers who stayed by their posts at great personal sacrifice. There are few teachers left in our schools who couldn't earn better incomes in other employment, but we are not getting replacements because young people are not going into teacher training when funds aren't available to pay adequate school salaries. We either have to increase State support of our elementary schools, or we will soon have a serious breakdown in our school system."

Mr. Cloud, as one of the proponents of Proposition 9 on the November ballot, which would increase State support of the schools from $60 per child, per year, to $80, declares that present conditions are convincing proof that school people were right when they circulated initiative petitions to present the measure to the people. " There have been certain groups,," said Cloud, "which scoffed at warnings of the crisis that is now a reality. In view of what is happening to our schools, I predict they will soon have to change tactics."

It is now Technical Sergeant Henry A. Sanfilippo since his recent promotion at Camp Roberts where he is in an infantry training battalion. Henry is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Sam Sanfilippo formerly of Campbell, now living in Willow Glen.

Hedda Hopper: Looking at HOLLYWOOD

SONNY TUFTS is a fugitive from the social register. A blue-blooded rebel. A Boston Back Bay backslider. He has loused up family tradition from childhood. This strange admixture of social breeding, good education, revolutionary spirit, utter frankness and self-belittling makes him the most colorful personality Hollywood has seen in many a moon.

Sonny tells me his family is in such a rut it hasn't moved out of a radius of three square miles in 300 years. A forebear of his founded Tufts college—must have had a guilty conscience, says Sonny. His family for generations were Harvard Men. When Sonny broke away and went to Yale his mother wired him, "Yale may be for some people, but not for us."

Sonny Tufts

His first year in the movies was amazing. A year after he had ambled through a Hollywood studio gate looking for a chance to do anything at all in a movie he was an official star teamed with Paulette Goddard in "I Love a Soldier."

He recently topped the 10 players elected for stardom by the nation's exhibitors in the Motion Picture Herald's annual "stars of tomorrow" poll.

Vital Statistics

The six-foot-four, 200-pound blond was born in Boston 29 years ago last July 16 and was christened Bowen Charleton Tufts III. He's never been called anything but Sonny.

His family expected him to train for business and finance, his father being a famous banker. But Sonny, at eight, saw Eddie Cantor, and asked his dad, "Would you care if I became an actor?" Wise Tufts Sr. replied, "Not if you're a good one."

He went to the exclusive Philips-Exeter, where he majored in Greek (honestly), rowed on the crew, was cheer leader during the football season, and organized a band. His band made money, but Sonny was inclined to cockiness, and when he let a summer hotel engagement slip out of his mitts because he was too sure he had it, his father decided he needed a practical lesson. Sonny was sent to Plymouth as a house-to-house seller of refrigerators. He surprised every one, including himself, by winning the district sales contest—and a silver cup.

At Yale he was a legend. He started out by spending two years in the freshman class. He majored (hold your hats!) in anthropology, and even today talks glibly about races and reads heavy tomes on the subject.

A Fling at Opera

The summer before his senior year he heard Tito Schipa sing. He decided he, too, would be a great opera star.

The big lunk worked his way to Paris on a freighter and spent 6 months studying there and 18 months locked in a room back in New York learning opera scores. He was given an audition at the Met, but found out how little his starting salary would be, so leaped into a Broadway musical, "Who's Who." He was barely in it—slightly more in "Sing for Your Supper." So he turned to singing his own material at swanky hotel spots in New York and Palm Beach.

Hammed His Way In

Joe Egli, Paramount director, gave Sonny an audition, then a test. Sonny picked something from a batch of test scripts, choosing one he thought he could make funny. Long after this howling test had won him a contract he discovered he had clowned Charles Boyer's most tender love scene from "Love Affair." A week after the contract was inked Mark Sandrich saw the test, gave him another with Paulette Goddard, then the role opposite her in "So Proudly We Hail." That made the big bloke, and he went into "Government Girl," "I Love a Soldier," "Bring On the Girls," and then "Here Come the WAVES," with Bing Crosby and Betty Hutton.

Sonny makes friends easily, quickly. He's colorful every inch of his frame and it would take more than a story like this to outline all of his adventures. But the best story he told me was about the four WAVES he gave a farewell party to before they took off for duty. He wanted to bring in a couple of his pals, but the WAVES said: "What—and spoil our fun? We want Tufts!" They made it their theme song.

Listed in the marriage licencees are Arthur Silacci, 33 of Campbell, and Eunice T. Gabbani, 23, of Santa Clara

Grace Moore Opens Concert Series Tonight

The San Jose musical season is off to a brilliant start tonight when the irresistible Grace Moore, who "gets them all, from the giddy to the grumpy," sings in the civic auditorium as the first event of the Ninth Annual San Jose Concert series. Miss Moore's gowns are as much a legend as her beauty, voice and personality, so many are looking forward to the opening picture of the glamorous diva.

Then on Monday evening, Oct. 23, comes the greatest event there is in music, and the greatest in San Jose's musical history, the coming down from the War Memorial Opera House of the full San Francisco Opera company in the production of Donizetti's "Lucia di Lammermoor." Lily Pons, Jan Peerce, Ivan Patroff, John Garris, Lorenzo Alvary, Thelma Votipka and Joseph Tissier are the principals. The chorus, opera ballet and San Francisco symphony will be conducted by Pietro Cimara.

Both Monday's and tonight's curtain will be at exactly 8:15. The audience is urged to come early, at least by 8 o'clock, as late comers will have to wait until the end of the first group of Miss Moore's songs, and late comers at the opera will disturb all who come on time.

Henry P. Crews of Santa Cruz passed away Saturday and funeral rites were held in Gilroy Tuesday. Deceased was the father of Melvin T. Crews of North Union avenue, Campbell.
